CONSTRUCTION BEGINS ON THE ALL NEW TALVOR CARAVAN RANGE!

Leading Australian campervan and motorhome manufacturer Talvor Motorhomes announced today that construction of their eagerly anticipated Caravan Range has begun.

This exciting project afforded Talvor's design team a rare opportunity to begin with a blank page brief to bring together the latest in 3D design technology, a comprehensive review of current best practice in caravan production and the best available construction materials.

Executive General Manager of Operations, Paul Truman; "In the early stages we made a decision to move away from a traditional 'stick and tin' construction methodology. After considerable research it was concluded that a moulded composite construction would increase strength, improve insulation and also represent the latest in contemporary styling".

While elements of the Talvor caravans will reflect global best practice, Talvor caravans also draw upon methods and materials that have been proven over decades in harsh Australian conditions. A great example of this is the choice to utilise a more traditional galvanised steel chassis over the most contemporary materials available.

CEO Luke Trouchet elaborates; 'As an organisation, we have a 25 year pedigree in turning out high quality RV's under the Apollo banner, most of which are destined for a challenging life in Apollo's international holiday rental fleet. The 'toughness' we build into our RV's to withstand the rigours of rental life was something that we were determined to incorporate into our caravans from the outset'.

While potential customers will no doubt take comfort knowing that a Talvor caravans will be built to last in Australian conditions, the internal look and feel of the vans will undoubtedly position the product amongst the premium players in the caravan market.

Initial production will be limited to ensure the highest possible attention to detail however early indications from the industry suggests that initial production quotas will be taken up very quickly when the first production caravans hit the parks in early 2011.
